Wine Reviews: California Sauvignon Blanc

February 21, 2015

It's the dead of winter here in the mid-Atlantic and crisp white wines might not be the first choice when you're thinking of cracking open a bottle. But if you're in the mood for seafood and salads, or you're lucky enough to find yourself on a warm, sunny deck somewhere closer to the equator, California Sauvignon Blanc is a good call.

Light golden color. Bright lemon-lime peel on the nose, some white cherries, grapefruit and guava, accented by hints of white and green pepper. Bright and zingy but some nice creaminess as well. Lime and grapefruit play off of guava and pineapple, and the fruit is dashed with some grass, white pepper and honeysuckle. Clean, fresh but good weight, very food-friendly. All stainless steel.
